

I pay a premium for satellite radio which is by far superior to any other service. The content and quality is unrivaled. No one should have the right to try and stop the content of satellite radio unless there is some type of unfair business practices.

The NAB's attempt to limit satellite content is simply an old established and powerful organization trying to protect itself from an emerging technology that is superior. The NAB has no right to use it's powerful lobby to squash emerging technology or competition. How would the NAB have felt if powerful newspaper lobbies had tried to squash am radio 70 or 80 years ago when radio was in infancy. If that had happen, we would not have radio and the technology as we have today. The FCC would not even exist.
